

Trouble

Violet, a girl blind who forgot everything, was lying hopeless on her bed. She was five years old. Since she was three years old, she would scratch her eyes, but she could only see the sunlight. Soon she was not able to see even the sunlight!

Violet forgot everything. She cried when someone hugged her, or even touched her. Violet's parents always wept because Violet could not remember them and they felt sorry for her, too. Everyday, Violet cried and was injured from bumping her head against the wall. So Violet's parents made a decision to let Violet have surgery to get her memory and sight back. They knew Violet would feel terrible pain for a very long time, but they wanted to see Violet hugging them, running about, but most of all, smiling.

They signed all the necessary medical forms and Violet went into the operating room. Violet's parents were very scared and thought about Violet dying or what will happen to her after the surgery. Violet's mother thought, Will she return to the normal happy Violet? Or will she just same? Please, God, help my poor daughter, prayed Violet's father. The surgery took five hours. The doctor came out of the operating room with a girl with black shades. It was Violet! The doctor said they couldn't get all her memory back, but they did repair her blindness. Still, Violet had to wait until her eyes were 100% cured.

After a month or so, Violet was smiling and running around with her friends. She saw crystal clear flowers with a moon-like shine. She ran and tripped over a brown stick, but she was still smiling when she stood up. She started to run again. Her blond hair was tangled, but Violet didn't care because she was feeling fantastic. Violet's parents were drinking tea in their backyard, while watching Violet. They looked as happy as Violet. To make Violet happy and to help her get her memory back, her parents took Violet to the zoo, the waterpark, and to the movie theater that month.

Soon, she was back to the old Violet. Her parents started to teach Violet those things she had learned before. They also took her to the museum to learn about the ancient histories and discoveries.

After a few years, Violet became a very successful student in her new school.